

Paul Masica, Vice President of Operations

Paul Masica established QPM in 1995 after recognizing the need for an outside company to assist major corporations with capital expenditures and program management. He founded the organization with the vision to make QPM a leader in the construction industry for program and project management. Since the company's inception, Masica has been involved in managing QPM programs in all 50 states. His current role includes managing the daily operations of the business, mentoring staff and fostering the culture of QPM.

Masica has more than 20 years of commercial construction experience, serving in a number of management positions for companies ranging from unionized manufacturing facilities to large corporations. Prior to founding QPM, Masica served as a construction manager for Texaco Refining and Marketing, Inc. During his six-year tenure with the organization, he was responsible for managing projects in the Arizona and Nevada markets. He successfully helped complete the acquisition that made Texaco a prominent marketer in the southwest region.

Masica began his construction career with Madison Industries, Inc., as the supervisor of Modular Building. He was initially involved in the heavy industrial sector, and later moved into commercial construction where he supervised a modular building production line, which specialized in modular convenience stores, school buildings and fast-food restaurants.

Throughout his career, Masica has been recognized for his outstanding industry contributions and is the recipient of numerous awards including the Tempe Beautification Award, Individual Contributor Award and the Superstars Award from Texaco.

Masica earned his bachelor's degree in construction management from Colorado State University. He is continuing his education at the University of Phoenix, where he is acquiring his master's in organizational management.
